

Shizuru Suzuki: University of Miyazaki Student in Australia

One other student studying in Australia now thanks to a Tobitate scholarship is Shizuru Suzuki, a third-year undergraduate in the Faculty of Agriculture. She will be in Australia during the period from August 20, 2016, to April 30, 2017.

Shizuru is doing an internship at the Bell Tree Ranch New South Wales as well as the Hornery Ranch in Queensland. (By a coincidence, the Bell Tree Ranch is run by another person named “Suzuki” and the name of the ranch is a direct translation of the meaning of that Japanese name.)

The aim of Shizuru’s overseas stay is to learn more about how Wagyu beef is raised in Australia. She also wants to find out what are the differences between that Australian Wagyu and the Wagyu that is produced in Japan. Her dream in the future is to promote Japanese Wagyu all over the world and run her own agricultural operation in Australia. In order to learn more about business management, she plans to take part in internships at both a large-scale and a small-scale ranch.
